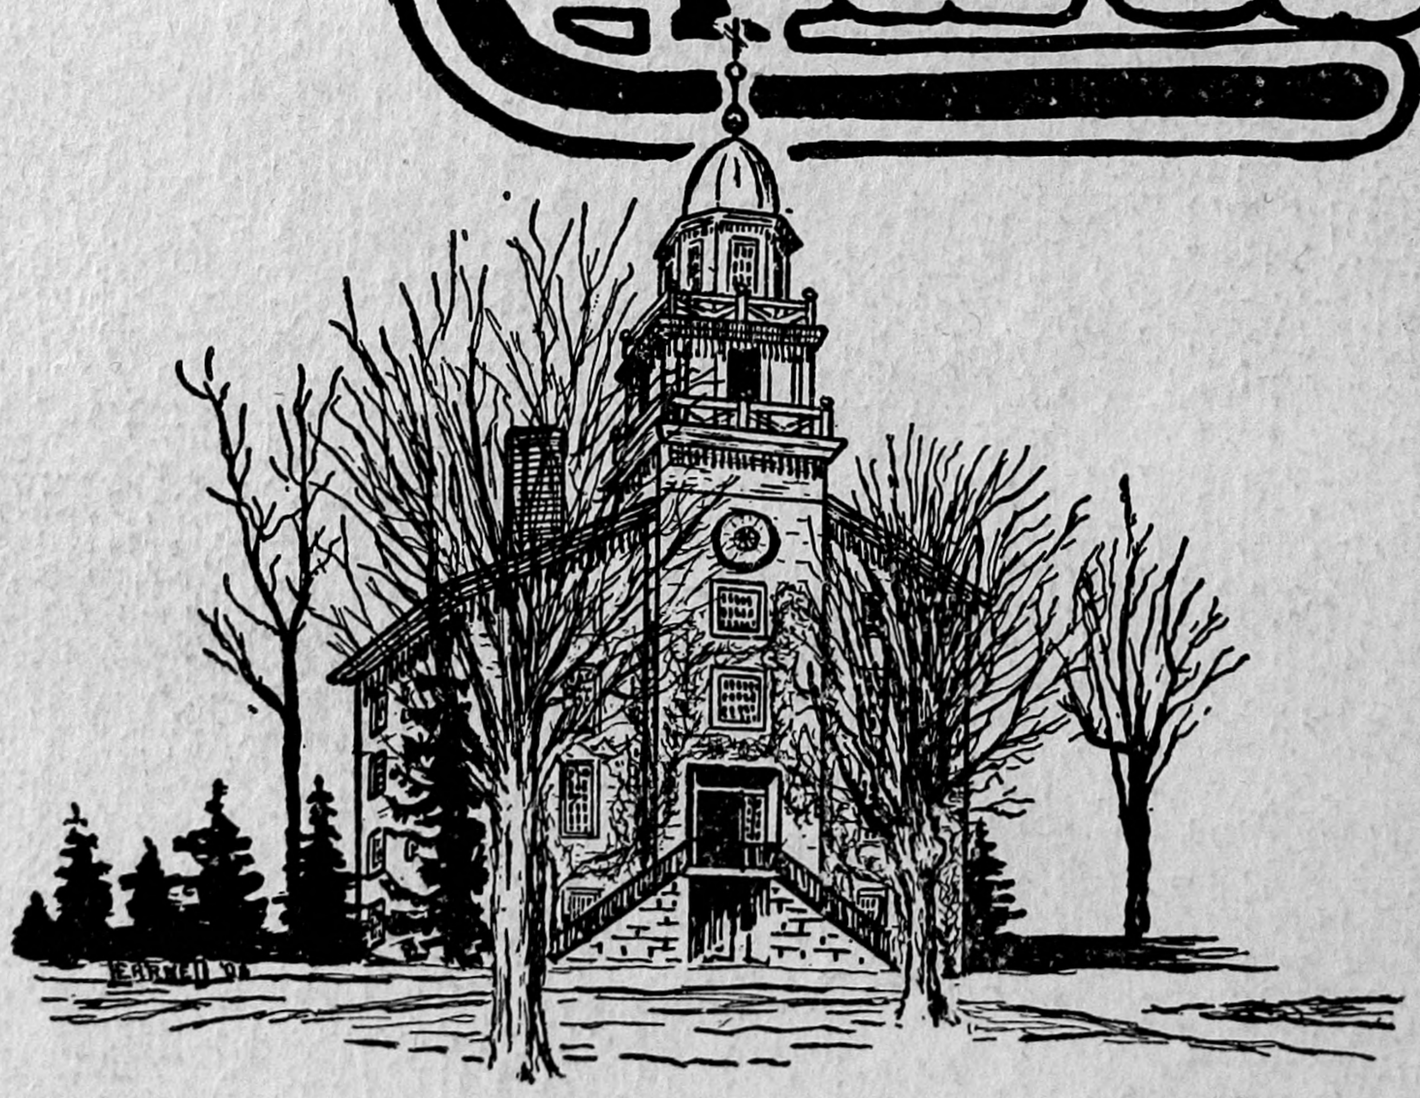
The Middlebury Campus



MIDDLEBURY COLLEGE,

FOUNDED IN 1800.

REQUIREMENTS FOR ADMISSION—CLASSICAL COURSE.

LATIN.—Grammar, including Prosody; Cæsar, four books of the Gallic War; Cicero, six orations; Vergil, six books of the Æneid; Latin Composition; History of Rome, through the Antonines.

GREEK.—Grammar; Xenophon's Anabasis, four books; Homer's Iliad, three books; Prose Composition; History of Greece to the death of Alexander.

Real equivalents will be accepted in place of any of the requirements named above.

MATHEMATICS.—Arithmetic, including the Metric system; Algebra, through Quadratic Equations; Wentworth's Geometry, five books.

ENGLISH.—The reading recommended by the Commission of Colleges in New England on Admission Examinations.

REQUIREMENTS FOR ADMISSION—LATIN-SCIENTIFIC COURSE.

The same as for the Classical course, with the exception of the Greek, in place of which is required a knowledge of English History such as may be secured by thorough study of a work like Montgomery's; American History, based on such a work as Johnston's; and the outlines of American Literature; also French or German as follows: French 1. Ability to translate simple prose at sight. For this purpose, at least 400 pages of text should be read. French 2. Proficiency in the elements of grammar. German 1. Ability to translate simple prose at sight. For this purpose, at least 250 pages of text should be read. German 2. Proficiency in the elements of grammar.

For more definite statements see College catalogue.

Students from such fitting schools as have thorough courses fully meeting the above requirements will be admitted without examination, on the certificate of their respective principals that they have completed the courses and mastered all that is required for admission. Blank certificates for either course will be forwarded on application.

GENERAL INFORMATION.

The College is finely located in the midst of a beautiful park in the village of Middlebury, Vermont. The locality is healthful, and the College offers the advantage of thorough instruction at a moderate cost.

The courses of instruction are of two kinds, required and elective, and each student is required to have at least fifteen hours of recitation a week. All the studies for the Freshman and the first two terms of the Sophomore year are prescribed. In the Junior and Senior years, nine and six hours respectively a week are prescribed, the studies for the remaining hours being selected by the student from the elective courses offered. These are numerous, and varied from year to year.

The College Library contains about 26,000 volumes. It is open to students every day except Sunday; all books are accessible to them, and complete catalogues indicate the location of each volume.

EDITORIAL.

THE CAMPUS appeals to two distinct classes of subscribers, the alumni and the undergraduates. The interests of the two bodies are in the main identical. Each desires the publication of a paper that will be of most service to the college. Yet there are special demands which each class of subscribers may rightfully make. The alumni desire distinctly alumni news; the undergraduates are interested in the events of every day college life. The editors hope to satisfy each of these demands, as far as lies in their power. Last year the foundations of THE CAMPUS were wisely laid. We do not hope to improve upon those foundations, but it will be our constant aim to fill out the details of the plan which the founders had in mind. In short, we hope to aid in building up a paper that shall adequately represent all the best phases of college life and thoughts. We invite your cooperation.

THE student movement for an entertainment course this winter is materializing, and considerable money has been collected for the purpose of engaging speakers. It has been suggested that two evenings might be devoted to some form of entertainment other than the lecture. There is much musical and dramatic talent lying dormant that might well be utilized for the common pleasure and benefit. No doubt every one who could would be glad to contribute time and effort. The many weeks of winter often hang heavily on our hands, and we waste the extra time which might be devoted to things profitable as well as pleasant. Let all college activities that are wholesome and helpful—glee clubs, theatricals, lectures, debates—be encouraged. There is usually little danger that they will be overdone, or that they will in any marked degree interfere with the serious business of our college life.

THE CAMPUS has met with a material loss in the absence from its working force of Prof. Charles B. Wright who sailed for Europe early in January, accompanied by his wife and daughter. He has served as editor-in-chief since the inception of THE CAMPUS and will be greatly missed in his editorial capacity, as in all other departments of his college work. Professor Wright's varied gifts have enabled him to hold a large place in the college life. He has occupied the chair of English Literature since 1885 and has been in contact with hundreds of Middlebury students, not only guiding them in their arduous attempts at English composition, but stimulating them by his influence to know and love the best in literature. It is a distinctive feature of his teaching that he gives his heart, as well as his head, to the work. After over twenty consecutive years of service, he is enjoying a well earned vacation. He sailed directly for Italy and will spend the winter and spring in Naples, Rome, and Florence. Certainly no one is better fitted than he to get both pleasure and profit out of contact with the life and masterpieces of the Old World. In succeeding issues we hope to publish special articles from his pen. Since he is by this time on the sacred soil, a bon voyage is a wish realized. The staff of THE CAMPUS joins with every reader in wishing him wherever he goes or bides—God speed.

Born to R. C. Ransom, ex-'07, a son, Philip R., Nov. 11, 1905.

NEW YORK ALUMNI DINNER.

The Annual Dinner of the New York Alumni Association of Middlebury College was held at the University Club, Fifth Avenue and Fifty-fourth Street, on the evening of January 26. Fifty-nine men were seated at the tables, the largest number in the history of the Association.

Preceding the dinner came the usual reception, at which everyone had an opportunity to meet Governor Bell, the guest of the evening, and to renew friendships with old class-mates.

Following the lead of the Governor and President Brainerd, all then filed into the banquet hall and, after grace by Doctor Boardman, were seated at the tables which were arranged in the form of the letter "E". As the feast progressed stories began to circulate, especially among the younger alumni, —how "Bill" Stone is making $5,000 a year on Ayer's Sarsaparilla; how "Thed" Wells is running the motor-boat races in Florida; how Thompson, with the able assistance of "Pick" Fisher, has charge of an entire celluloid factory, employing a thousand hands; and how "P" Wilds is assisting Mr. Choate on his most important cases, until the wonder grew that any of the men named deigned to come to such a modest dinner. Dr. H. H. Vail presided and introduced the speakers.

Governor Bell invited all to give up the strenuous life in New York and get back to nature among the hills of Vermont. He asserted that the test of a man is his ability to do things, and that to break a yoke of steers or teach a calf to drink is a pretty good test. He eulogized Vermont, not only as a place in which to be born, but as a place in which to live, and said that if the same business ability and method were used in farming as is used in other kinds of business, the rewards would be certain and ample. The Governor spoke of Vermont as a summer resort, but declared that Vermont in winter is unsurpassed, and gave a word picture of a winter morning that refroze the ice-cream and made the crockery glitter like cut glass. He finished by commenting on the good work the Grange is doing in the state for the business, social and intellectual interests of the people.

Ex-Governor McCullough described at some length the woes of an Ex-Governor of Vermont. "Why," said he, "the woods are full of them. When one goes hunting for deer he is more likely to hit an Ex-Governor than a buck," The Governor was in fine form, and for fifteen or twenty minutes kept the table in a roar. After jollying Governor Bell upon Vermont politics and telling how, at a midsummer convention, one always knows when the delegates from snowy Walden are coming into the Pavilion Hotel by the stamping of their feet outside the door, he passed from gay to grave and told an eloquent story of the early heroes of Vermont, and reminded his hearers that without an inch of sea-coast the Green Mountain State had furnished two great naval commanders for the Spanish-American war.

President Brainerd ably set forth the present condition of the college and its prospects.

Hon. Charles Hubbell, former President of the Board of Education of New York City, proved conclusively that competitive athletics are detrimental to the growing student.

Principal W. B. Gunnison, of Erasmus High School, followed with a talk on the comparative advantages of the small college and university.

Professor Howard was given a royal welcome. He gave a rapid review of the history of the college during the twenty years of President Brainerd's administration, and ended by asking for $25,000 for a new gymnasium.

W. W. Gay, of the New York World, read a poem, which we print in another column.

The party then broke up, after electing the following officers:

President, John M. Thomas; Executive Commitee, Frederick H. Button, Carl A. Mead, George D. Scott; Secretary-Treasurer, Louis W. Severy.

Following is a list of those present:

Governor Bell, Mr. Henry H. Vail, Colonel Billings, President Ezra Brainerd, Ex-Gov. John G. McCullough, Hon. Charles Bulkley Hubbell, Walter B. Gunnison, Professor Walter E. Howard, W. W. Gay, Doctor George N. Boardman, Professor J. W. Abernethy, Col. S. A. Ilsley, Professor Brainerd Kellogg, Ex-Justice E. W. Hatch, James M. Gifford, Clarke Williams, Hon. A. B. "THESE BE PARLOUS TIMES, MY MASTERS."

(Read at the New York Alumni Dinner.)

In olden times when steeple hats
  And powdered polls were all the fashions,
When it was counted not a sin
  To drink Jamaica rum in lashins,
Our good forefathers deemed it wise
  To give their sons an education,
And lay foundations deep and broad
  Of private character and nation.
So up went Harvard, Nassau, Yale,
  To God and Wisdom consecrated,
To studious days and churchly ways,
  Humanities with dogmas mated.
They toiled and moiled on farm and bench
  To gather wherewithal for knowledge,
To cram into the touseled heads
  Of Benjamins they sent to college.
While father sheared and mother span
  To keep their hopefuls clothed in breeches,
And fought Apollyon and his imps
  In wrestling prayer, and burned the witches,
Their Benjamins burned candle ends
  At midnight and in early matin,
O'er tomes by ancient scholars writ
  In puzzling Greek and crabbed Latin.

Perhaps their founts of Castaly
  Were common springs and muddy rather;
Perhaps more than old Plato's feet
  They sought the knees of Cotton Mather;
Perhaps in Calvin trusting much
  They were too fond of dark prognostics;
Perhaps their logic now would win
  A pitying smile from wise agnostics;
But there grew up brave men of might,
  Could preach all day and night if need were.
(To preach a sermon less in length
  Than theses nine a shameful deed were,
Which calls to mind the man who asked
  An old-time parson why the new shuns
To build to ninthly Sunday morns
  Thence, afternoons, to draw conclusions,
And got reply from twinkling eye—
  The words, I trust, I rightly quote 'em—
"They have no ninthlys, friend, to write,
  Couldn't draw conclusions if they wrote em.")
And where they went they bore the torch
  Lit at the altars of Athena,
And in the woods, in school-house rude,
  Unpacked the goddess's arcana.
We know what sort of men they bred,
  How when Old Britain's laws perverted
Imperilled Yankee rights, they rose
  And in the forum controverted
The sophistries of George and North;
  How rang assembly hall and pulpit
With eloquence that Tories pricked
  As bulls are goaded in a bull-pit;
And how the muses fed their fires
  With verses classic and sarcastic,
(Too much like mine, though I'm afraid,
  More doggerel even than Hudibrastic);
And how, when war began, they dropped
  The bands and gowns and worldly togas,
And fought for God and home like men
  At Bunker Hills and Saratogas.

I'm sure the steeple hats looked down
  From Heavenly bliss and said: "Yea, truly,
We did God's work in building schools,
  And, lo, He sanctifies it duly."
And I feel sure they did not grudge
  The sacrifices made for knowledge,
Nor did their Benjamins count lost
  Their years of toiling at the college.
But had they then looked far enough
  Into the future and uncovered
Our wider views—how vain is all,
  How useless, foolish, had discovered,
How idle Greek and Latin, and
  How out of date the pristine heathen,
Who dreamed philosophy was worth
  A life of study—had they seen then
How practical we would become,
  How we would laugh down their ideal
And in the light of gold would learn
  There is but one ideal—the real
Hard cash, and that's success which finds
  In worldly wealth its only measure,
Would they have thought then after all
  The thing they bought was worth the treasure?
What would they think of him who says
  Three years are quite enough for scholars

To waste in college—three long years
  Lost to the noble hunt for dollars?
What would they think if, asking Prex
  To show the college pride—its hero—
They faced a hirsute youth of form
  Of Hercules and face of Nero;
And, asking for his virtues, hear:
  "Pray, sirs, just feel this mighty muscle.
Mark this, his medal proudly worn—
  Nose broken in last foot-ball tussle"?
How would they stare to learn that Yale
  Gets fortunes yearly, yet enhances
Tuition's cost as if with hope
  To make collegiate "Fads and Fancies."
What would they say if they could hear
  Our fair Minerva like her brother,
Pipe "coaxy wax" and "sis boom ah",
  Shriek in the basket-ball heap's smother?
Our chaste Minervas who, once out
  Of Vassar, frown upon the state o'
Dull marriage and in clubs discuss
  The burning question: "Who wrote Pla to?'

But are in letters triumphs won
  No more? Why, yes; our foot-ball teacher
Writes often for the brilliant page
  That's "edited by Harry Beecher."
Some of our "Profs" are widely read,
  And some of them are deeply yellow,
On Shakespeare lectured we're by some
  Who never knew he wrote Othello.
In chemistry we're deep. We know—
  For the devil's not so black as painted—
The solvents of his brimstone touch,
  So welcome all the cash that's tainted.
Our Reverend Prosper for you will
  A tasty pulpit-pudding dish up,
Or fend a cleric lack of faith
  As cleverly as Browning's bishop.
And in the law behold—eheu.—
  Climb to the Senate on the trusty
Ladder of press puff, railway pass
  And retailed jokes grown somewhat musty,
Whose learning's such—and pray you, mark
  The long neglected law's endurance—
It's worth just 20,000 "plunks"
  Kept to himself—we've high assurance.

A truce to nonsense. Still we know
  In many a favored seat of learning
Athena walks her sacred groves
  Where bright her altar fires are burning.
And Arnolds yet, unseeking fame,
  Their noble influence are spending,
And forth well rounded earnest men
  Into the world are yearly sending.
And men are yet who wisdom hold
  The pearl of pearls, and value knowledge
For its own self, and strange to say
  They're even found in a "hayseed" college.
Ah, Alma Mater, go your way
  And never mind your sister's "jollies",
Hold up, hold high, the ancient light
  And leave to them their fads and follies.

SCIENTIFIC ASSOCIATION MEETING.

The annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science was held at New Orleans, Dec. 29—Jan. 3. The Association is made up of affiliated organizations, each working in some special field of scientific investigation. One of the affiliated bodies is the Botanical Society of America, which restricts its membership to those who have carried on original scientific research of a high grade. As its name indicates, it is the leading botanical organization of the continent. We take special pride in recording the fact that Dr. E. A. Burt, of Middlebury College, presided over the sessions of the society at New Orleans. At this meeting technical papers were read by eminent scientists from many leading colleges and universities. On the return trip Doctor Burt spent a day inspecting the Tuskegee Normal Institute, at Tuskegee, Ala.

Would it not be wise to have the New York Alumni Banquet a little more elaborately reported in the New York city papers?

THOMAS SWAN HUBBARD.

Thomas Swan Hubbard, the oldest living graduate of Middlebury College, has been a minister of the Gospel in the valley of the White River for more than sixty-six years, that is, for two-thirds of a century. His only extended absence from this sequestered vale was more than a generation ago, when he served a church in northern Illinois for one or two years. He has removed to and fro in the valley of the White River during three score years, preaching to at least six churches, and being recalled by one or two of them to a second pastorate. He is now quietly completing his life at Stockbridge, the central point of the valley. It was there he began his ministry in 1839, continuing for seven years until 1846. Thither he returned in 1855 and served another seven years until 1862. He returned still a third time in 1878, serving more especially the church in the neighboring village of Pittsfield, until increasing age and deafness forbade his attempting regular work. The other towns in the White River valley served by him as pastor were Royalton, 1846; Chelsea, 1847–1854; Gaysville, 1864–1868; Rochester, 1868–1878.

His entering the Congregational Church was a departure from the church of his parents who were members of the Episcopalian denomination. It was, however, a return to the church of his grandfather, the Rev. John Hubbard. who was for forty-five years pastor at Northfield, Mass. A printed copy of the sermon preached at the funeral of this ancester names him on the title page:

"That good man and faithful Minister of Christ,
REV. JOHN HUBBARD,
Who departed this life Nov. 28, 1774, in the Sixty-ninth year of his age and the forty-fifth of his ministry."

The statement is added that "he was ordained pastor of the church of Christ in Northfield, May 30, 1750, married Miss Anna Hunt, daughter of Captain Hunt of Northfield, Dec. 26, 1753, by whom he had ten children, six of whom are now living and are much respected in society, to wit, four sons and two daughters." The third of these sons, Samuel Hubbard, married Elizabeth Swan, daughter of William Swan of Northfield, and removed to Franklin, Vt., where Thomas Swan Hubbard was born Dec. 20, 1811. He was prepared for college at St. Albans, Vt., and attended Middlebury College for four years, taking the degree of A. B. He afterwards studied at Andover Theological Seminary until 1838. He found there among the old professors Moses Stuart and Edward Robinson; Also Edwards A. Park, who was only three years his senior. The last named says in writing of Andover Seminary: "The creed which lies at the basis of the Seminary adopts the substance of Calvanism as well as the substance of Hopkinsianism. The creed is like the Westminster Assembly Catechism in substance, but is considerably different in form." This was Mr. Hubbard's creed.

From the first two professors he gained familiar knowledge of the Scriptures in the original tongues and in his old age Mr. Hubbard reads daily, by preference, the Greek rather than the English New Testament.

When Mr. Hubbard was at Andover the Faculty had founded there The American Biblical Repository, a learned theological review. Andover was thus a center of inspiration for scholarly theology and orthodox evangelism and, it may also be added, of Christian philosophy. Mr. Hubbard never ceased to feel, speak, and act throughout life under each of these influences which laid hold of him so strongly as a young man. He early gained a local reputation for his ability to maintain, especially in public debate, the theological platform adopted by him in early manhood.

Upon the ancient yet well preserved marble over his grandfather's grave in Northfield may be read several lines from Goldsmith's Deserted Village describing the country pastor. In one line the word "eighty" is substituted for the word "forty" so that it reads:

"A man he was to all the country dear,
And passing rich at eighty pounds a year."

Either line was substantially true of the grandson as well. His average salary for the sixty-six and two-thirds years of his life in White River Valley has hardly exceeded the eighty pounds a year. He has won and kept the universal esteem of the people who have known him. The severest criticisms passed upon him have been that he did not sufficiently hold himself above other people, as did the New England pastor of a hundred years earlier; that he was too unassuming and too unambitious.

A Vermonter is, of course, a patriot. Mr. Hubbard's patriotism was so highly thought of in the critical period of the breaking out of the Civil War that he was elected, in 1860, to serve as State Senator. He had also served for more than one term as Representative in the Legislature. When comparatively a young man, he had served as County Superintendent of Schools. Even to extreme old age he has kept himself well informed as to the political condition of the nation.

Being, for a long time, pastor of communities mostly devoted to farming, Mr. Hubbard took great interest in the introduction of improvements in the agriculture of White Valley. His especial fondness, however, was for horticulture and for improving the orchards by grafting. Unnumbered trees in the valley have been grafted with his own hands without any expectation or acceptance of pecuniary recompense. He also made himself an authority on local geology. Those who accepted his judgment profited by it at one period and another, as for example when their neighbors were deluded by enthusiasts from the outside who led many foolish ones to waste their hard earned money in seeking for grains of gold in the shining bed of the White River.

Mr. Hubbard married, Sept. 24, 1839, in Stockbridge, his first parish, Mary Paige Fay, the daughter of Dr. Timothy Fay, a physician of White River Valley for more than half a century. Their children were Timothy Fay, who died in infancy; Catherine Almira, married, July 2, 1872, to Henry Mitchell MacCracken, who has for many years been Chancellor of New York University, and Thomas Corwin Hubbard, who died in Fort Worth, Texas, where he had established himself in business and where his three children reside at this time.

HENRY MITCHELL MACCRACKEN.

FIRST IMPRESSIONS OF OXFORD.

So many books and articles regarding Oxford have been published in America that an account of one's personal impressions and experiences must contain much that is of little interest.

If a person but remembers that most of the colleges at Oxford were originally founded as monastic schools, it will help him to understand many of the peculiar customs which still exist. As he enters the city from the station he will be disappointed if he expects to pass by green lawns, broad walks, and the magnificent shade trees which beautify so many of our American universities. In fact, he will be among the colleges almost before he is aware, and will see only huge grey walls with the windows on the lower floors securely barred. There are lawns and walks connected with many of the colleges, and many of these gardens are very beautiful, but all are enclosed within high stone walls, the tops of which are fringed with broken glass embedded in cement. Most of the colleges have an entrance on one of the main streets, but this gate is usually shut; for every-day use the students must use the "side door" which usually opens out upon some narrow side street. Here is located the porter's lodge which one enters by means of a small door in the huge oak gate. This gate is always locked and at nine-five p. m. the small door is locked too, and Mr. Student can neither get in nor get out without arousing the porter and being fined a small sum which increases as the hour grows later. But woe betide that luckless man who "knocks in" after twelve; his days in Oxford are numbered. Every student must provide himself with cap and gown which he is required to wear to hall dinner, while visiting his tutor, and when on the streets after nine p. m. To enforce the latter part of this rule, as well as to have general supervision of the deportment of the students, the University authorities appoint two of the instructors each year as proctors. Each proctor, accompanied by two men called "bull dogs," prowl around the streets every night between nine and twelve, looking for the careless man who has forgotten his gown. It is useless to run, for the bull dogs are true to their name both in speed and power of "holding on" and an attempt to escape incurs a double fine. The luckless victim is brought up before the "prog" who suavely asks his name and college, and then invites the miserable man to "come around to Magdalen tomorrow with five shillings." It is said that whenever the university chest needs replenishing the proctors become quite active. Among the students of certain colleges it is considered "very bad form" to wear a gown on the street, and so those students prefer to run the risk of an unwelcome meeting rather than wear their gowns.

Within the college walls the student fares very comfortably. The scout arouses him at seven thirty, pours out his bath, and prepares his breakfast, if he is not breakfasting out, while he makes a hasty toilet and runs over to keep rollers, just as he used to hustle for chapel at Midd. Lunch at one and tea at five, if he cares for it, are also served in his rooms, and at seven thirty dinner is served in the hall. Here again are traces of old monastic customs. At one end of the room on a platform is the Don's table; the students dine at long oak tables extending lengthwise of the room. The old oak benches without backs still serve as seats, but the wooden trenches have passed out of existence. When the confusion which always arises during the search for seats has partially subsided, the rector at the head of the Don's table, raps on the table and everyone rises while grace is said. At Exeter this is very short and always the same, "Benedictus Benedicat", and then the onslaught begins.

Most of the class-room work is from nine until twelve. It takes the form of lectures and attendance is optional. Each college has a tutor in each of the honor and pass schools and often more than one. These men direct the work of the students of their departments, advising them as to which lectures they should attend and giving lectures themselves two or three times per week on some part of the course. A student may therefore have lectures in four or five different colleges during the week. These lectures are supplemented by papers and examinations set by one's tutor.

Lectures are usually over for the day by one o'clock at the latest, and after lunch everyone dons his sweater and shorts and goes out for some kind of exercise. I say everyone, for the English climate makes it necessary for every man to take at least one or two hours of vigorous exercise each day if he wishes to keep in good health. Dons as well as students join in the sport. I have frequently seen tutors trudging down to the barges on the Isis for a pull down to Iffley Lock and back, or starting off with hockey stick in hand for a game in the University park. Exeter numbers about one hundred seventy-five men. These men support three football teams—Rugby, Association and the Capotters—a hockey team, a tennis club, a cricket eleven, and a rowing club which is drilling its men every week day throughout the year. Besides these athletic sports, a company of volunteers from Exeter attends the annual muster at Aldershot, a beagle club for hunting and cross country running is maintained, besides numerous debating clubs and literary societies.

If a man is fairly conscientious he will be occupied with breakfasts and lectures during the morning, with some form of athletics in the afternoon, followed by tea in some man's rooms or at Buoll's, and then, after hall dinner, he goes to the theatre in the evening or to a club dinner or smoker in one of the colleges. The proper hour for retiring is between twelve and one. You can just make "rollers" in the morning by putting a tie around your pajama collar, thrusting your feet into a pair of slippers, putting on one or two of the more necessary articles of clothing, and making a run for it. You may very pertinently ask: "Do you do any studying at all?" "Oh yes," they say, "we study during the vacations. In term we attend lectures and take notes, and during the vacations we have a chance to digest all these lectures and read up the texts." In England, where the men are not obliged to work during the vacations and where there are three terms of only eight weeks each, this is a very good plan, but there is reason to doubt whether some of the men ever do the studying. Many Rhodes men come to Oxford with the idea that the Oxford man is a fine scholar, a good athlete, and keenly alive to everything of importance occurring in the world at large. It is true that there is a large number of men who are fine students, good athletes, and well informed upon affairs of general interest, but there is a still larger class of men in Oxford, as in America to some extent, who have plenty of money and little ambition, and whose only purpose in coming to Oxford is to have a good time and get the name of being Oxford men. Some men spend two or three years in residence and never pass the entrance examination.

These rambling paragraphs will give but a vague idea of the every day life and character of some of the Oxford students. One could write at length on the merits of the tutorial system, on the English idea of athletics, and on the old and beautiful buildings which make Oxford famous in the educational world, all of which one comes to admire more and more as he becomes more familiar with them, and so can write more satisfactorily concerning them at a later date.

STRATFORD-ON-AVON.

We had a look at Stratford-on-Avon the other day—my mother, my sister, myself, and the Rhodes Scholar. He is a fairly good sort as Rhodes Scholars go, unassumingly related to all the first families in Virginia, and with only two vices of that insignificant brand which is really the most irritating. He will call things splendid, and he will insist on sleeping with the windows of his bedroom wide open. I call this sublime idiocy and have told him so with considerable emphasis, while stealing all his bed clothes, but he says "no". He asserts that it is an evidence of splendid intellectual strength; that only a nim-cum-poop, meaning me, would fail to grasp such a chance for being a Spartan.

To resume about Stratford. We saw Warwick Castle first, for Warwick and Stratford and Kenilworth are all in the same neighborhood. In fact it was here the Rhodes Scholar met us. Some parts of the castle date back a thousand years, and other parts are so modern as to be inhabited. My sister was at first inclined to think it would be very romantic to live in such a castle, and the Rhodes Scholar obediently thought it splendid. But I suspect that living with your forebears is really an enervating and boring process, though I did not allow that suspicion to detract in the least from my enjoyment of the castle.

It is a stately building. (Note that I refrain from the use of the word pile in this connection. If you insist, I will submit to being measured for a medal because of my forebearance). It is, then, a stately building with lofty walls, tall turrets, a massive gate, and a moat, once very deep, but now a well ordered jungle of growing things from grass and bushes to huge trees. White peafowl, those consorts of true nobility, and others of more gorgeous coloring, wander over the walls, and the clock over the gateway so sleepily strikes the lingering hours that you never would suspect this massive building to have been intended for a fortress. In fact, the Rhodes scholar pronounced it splendid and wanted to bet twopence three farthings against a "tanner" that there was a sleeping beauty somewhere around the place.

We were met, however, by an article in brass buttons and gold lace whose function it was to make us wonder and admire. He led us first through a long narrow hall where were collected mysterious and complicated weapons of all ages and every clime. We saw old swords and pistols, helmets and blunderbusses, cross bows and spears, enough to satisfy the most belligerent of Russians. My friend, the Rhodes Scholar, was anxious to pick a quarrel with some one, presumably myself or the "article," so that he might have the pleasure of experimenting with a peculiarly audacious dagger, whose edge was as wavy as one feels in a gale at sea, but mother put her foot down on the idea by saying she didn't believe in vivisection. It was probably just as well that she asserted herself. So we passed on to the state chambers.

I know nothing more delightfully uncomfortable than these chambers. We all admire fine furniture which we must not touch, but we cannot be said to enjoy it. These royal rooms were too gorgeously upholstered. The walls were littered with costly paintings by Van Dyck, Rubens, and others, and were adorned with tapestries woven to represent Italian garden scenes. In one room a picture of Queen Anne hung opposite a bed which once belonged to her. The bed was a tall four-poster, curtained, adamantine, but gorgeous, with a crown high up above the Old World coverlet. "Sublime!" said I. "Splendid!" said the Rhodes Scholar. "Jolly sublime!" said sister, who wants to be thought English. "Bugs!" said mother with the gleam of unending New England warfare in her eye. And we passed on.

The Cedar Room came next. It was panelled in cedar, whence its name, and contained a white marble fireplace of the eighteenth century. Here we were allowed to look out the windows. The view, commencing with the Avon flowing at our feet, stretched far away across an English park swimming in mist, as England does these winter months, and seeming but the fine tissue of a dream. The richness outside made a fitting foil to that within.

We were entranced with the great hall, from the huge antlers on the walls, to the huge fireplace and the huger punch bowl with its legend and its bit of history. A giant crusader once used this huge iron pot for a porridge bowl, so legend says, and now it hides the saddle on which Queen Elizabeth rode when she paid her visit to the Earl of Warwick. I understand that the saddle is removed when they make punch.

The gardens are those queer geometrical things which the Italians revel in, always reminding you of squares on the hypotenuse and other freaks of a disordered mind, and full of tortured evergreens — little fellows barely ten feet high, with their tops clipped to represent fantastic roosters, and such like birds of paradise, and beasts of prey. Terrace rises above terrace to a conservatory looking out over the river, the parks, and the wide landscape.

To resume about Stratford once more. Stratford is the American Mecca, and having been there we may now die. But Stratford is not all our ardent imaginations construct for us. Perhaps it really is as much as we expected; but it is much different than we dreamed. We have been taught about a village of thatched cottages among the lanes and hedge rows, where nothing ever moves but Time, and he with lingering tread looks ever backward as he goes. But that is not Stratford. The present town is entered from the rear. You have the usual back-door sights, and smells, and sounds of scolding servants, and he is disappointed because it looks so like West Balderdash, N. Y., or whatever American town you came from. It does not seem to bear about itself the slightest tinge of romance nor any old time beauty. One wishes that he might buy out an antique shop somewhere and rebuild Shakespeare's Stratford.

It was late when we arrived, and most of our sight-seeing had to wait until the following day, but that night we transgressed "all our splendid Wesleyan scruples," as the Rhodes Scholar so aptly put it, by attending the Memorial Theatre. The play was Sheridan's "School for Scandal." The acting might have been better, and it might have been worse. I can criticize no more than that, for I am no judge. But I do know that the Rhodes Scholar kept up a running fire of splendids, and my sister, in the næve manner of the American girl attempting to be truly English, pronounced it "simply ripping," if you can imagine what that may mean. I only said, "Sublime! Sublime!" while mother held her peace and breath through five acts and "the denouncement."

The touch of nature which makes the whole world kin came after. In the gloaming and the crowd a member of His Majesty's navy gave an illustration of its conquering tactics. His arm was around her and hers was around him, and in the midst of that vast crowd those two walked alone immersed in love's young dream. "Splendid!" said the descendent of George Washington, and "Jolly sweet!" my sister fair, while mother and myself were harking back to memories of the dim and distant past. That is I suppose mother was.

Bright and early the next morning we walked to Shottery. Anne Hathaway lived there you remember, and had what the old maids called an affair with Shakespeare. For I imagine the dear creatures "having ceased to struggle" enjoyed, from a safe distance, the awful complications of young love then as now. We found the cottage dressed for winter but still presentable. Our guide was a distressingly plain and fatigued young lady who seemed, from the interest she took, to have heard of Anne before. For she was frankly bored. There were three things of especial interest which she had to show us: first, a fireplace and its appurtenances; second, Anne's bed; third, another fireplace. The life of those days must have revolved around the fireplaces. Both had immense chimneys and the usual ovens and other things; but the appurtenances of chief interest was a settle, the very settle, so the girl said wearily, on which Anne courted William. No, no, I mean William courted Anne. This was prior to co-education. (Please overlook the cynicism. I am a hardened wretch.) But about the settle. The descendent of Thomas Jefferson said it wasn't splendid and sister called it "simply beastly nawsty, don't you know. I jolly well wouldn't stand such a narrow seat." Sister's attempts at English are excruciating. Mother merely looked pleased at the sagacity of Anne's parents. For the seat is only about six inches wide, and it would take more than the "Nelson clutch" Mr. Dooly describes to keep two people on it side by side at the same time. I know this is a horrid remark, but I want to say something emphatic so that it will get to the ears of the people in authority and compel them to get a reasonable settle in the place of that old wreck, in order that future visitors may have a chance to believe the guide's story. One wants to have the appropriate thrills tickling his spinal column when he is in Anne's cottage, and that is impossible with the old settle.

I nearly forgot the bed upstairs, but possibly it is just as well. I have seen better beds, but no worse ones. The mattress is of rushes, and Bessemer steel is softer. Anne must have been blest with a boneless constitution to have taken comfort on it. So I pass it over lightly, lest you ache in sympathy.

We next went back to Stratford and visited Shakespeare's birthplace. It has had a varied history. Since his day it has been both a butcher shop and an inn. It is now used as a museum. It seems idle to describe it. Other pens much more eloquent than mine have done so many times. One can but give his own impressions, and mine are chiefly of a little old lady who told us about the mysteries of the museum. She bored the rest, but interested me, because of the casual way in which she referred to old manuscripts, first quartos, folios, signatures of notable men, and so forth. She seemed quite like an old lady who has obtained hearsay evidence of some choice piece of gossip about which she knows but little, and who is rolling the morsel deftly under her tongue, proposing to edify the neighbors immediately. I was of course interested in the signatures of Carlyle and Scott scratched on the window panes in the room where Shakespeare was born, and in Browning's clear signature pencilled on a beam, but the delightful new story of the old lady was more interesting to me.

You will be glad that I have at last reached exhibit Z. I shall not say anything about Shakespeare's tomb in the old church by the river, but shall take you for a walk on the further bank. This is the front door of Stratford, and here you find the charm which has always haunted your disappointed imagination. At your feet flows the Avon delicately and softly, as it were past sacred ground, one of those quiet whispering streams that soothe tired souls, and just across is the churchyard with its graves. The chancel of the church is nearest the river, and there the poet lies listening always to the soft murmurings of the stream, while the church spire above pierces the clinging sky — that English sky which enfolds and soothes one as sweetly as a prayer. Behind the thousand chimneys of the little town are listlessly unfurling delicate bannerets of smoke. From this point all the pictures of Stratford are taken and here, if we are dreamers of the proper sort, we may build again the fair texture of that dream birthplace of the poet whom we love.

Yet that misguided descendant of the Randolph's, the Marshall's, and the Henry's, nay even it may be of the Princess Pocahontas, stood on this spot and called it splendid. It is hard to believe that he has within his heart the delicate figaments dreams are made of. We had best leave the scene while he hunts a better adjective.

AMERICA.

COPYRIGHT, 1905, BY THEODORE HENCKELS.

I

America the noble, free,
The home of human liberty;
Of thee with grateful heart I sing;
To thee my humble tribute bring.
Though young, great glory thou hast won;
In every clime thy name is known;
A noble task awaited thee;
Thy 'Declaration' made man free.

CHORUS: America forever,
The land of freedom's birth;
There never was a grander,
Or fairer land on earth.

Thy founders were a sturdy race,
Whose faith in God's eternal grace,
Gave them the strength to do and dare;
And He above them heard their prayer.
The seed of liberty they've sown,
Throughout the earth has swiftly grown;
And all that breathe join in their ode,
To freedom, virtue and to God.

Chorus (as above).

There is no other land like thee;
Thou art the fortress of the free;
All hail the hour, when first the song
Of freedom rang from human tongue.
May virtue, progress, peace,—these three,
Remain the watchword of the free;
And through the ages, as of yore,
God bless my country evermore.

Chorus (as above).

II

What is that flag the free acclaim?
The Stars and Stripes of glorious fame!
No nobler emblem wafts on earth,
Than greeted freedom's holy birth.
To thee, the banner of the free,
I pledge anew my loyalty;
To honor, virtue ever true,
Long live the grand Red, White and Blue!

CHORUS: For thee, beloved country,
We'll fight, though we may fall;
We'll follow grand 'Old Glory,'
Whenever comes thy call.

III

Thy country's first and noblest son,
We hail thy spirit, Washington;
With reverent hearts, thy countrymen
Unite and sing one great 'Amen'.
With joy we greet thy glorious name;
The Book of Time tells of thy fame:
The first in war, the first in peace!
Thy virtues, year by year increase.

CHORUS: With glory and with honor
Thy noble work was done;
Thy name we'll ever treasure;
It shines o'er freedom's throne.

[Professor Henckels has written the music for the above song, but it is not at present available for publication. On July 1, at least half a million copies of the song and music will be distributed in all parts of the United States.—ED.]

WASHINGTON BIRTHDAY BANQUET.

The Washington Birthday Banquet will be held in the town hall at Middlebury. In view of the rapid growth of the college family, the new arrangement is highly satisfactory. Under the leadership of Professor Henckels, the Banquet Committee is doing all in its power to make this year a red letter date in the history of our annual celebrations. A full report will appear in the April number of THE CAMPUS.

THE BULLETIN.

During the absence of Professor Wright his place is being filled by Mr. J. N. Rodeheaver, who holds the degrees of A. B. and A. M. from Ohio Wesleyan University, and is registered as a candidate for the degree of Ph. D. from Boston University.

The fourth book edited by Professor Henckels since becoming a professor in Middlebury College has just been published:

"Excursions sur les Bords du Rhin;" by A. Dumas; published by the American Book Co.

The other books are:

"Der Meister von Palmyra;" by A. Wilbrandt; published by the American Book Co.

"Jugendliebe;" by A. Wilbrandt; published by Henry Holt & Co.

"Marianne;" by George Sand; published by Henry Holt & Co.

The first two are recommended officially (New York State Educational Department, Syllabus 1905, Bulletin 27) by the Associated Academic Principals of the State of New York.

ACCESSION TO THE LIBRARY.

There has recently been added to the Library that great work, the Cyclopedia of Law and Procedure. Nineteen volumes have already been placed upon the shelves and that covers only half of the set. The remaining volumes will be issued at the rate or about four a year. This work, when completed, covers the whole realm of legal learning, and, being edited by men of first rate talent and enriched with the contributions of recognized experts and specialists in the various departments of the law, gives assurance of exhaustive and authoritative knowledge. It is a law library in itself. Taken together with the State Reports and the United States Supreme Court Reports, with such text writers as Blackstone and Kent, Storey and Cooley, and with many volumes upon the Civil Law, our library can hardly be excelled in this department among college libraries.

LIBRARY RULES.

The following library rules were formulated, for the most part, by Professor Wright. Since his departure a Library Committee of the faculty has made some slight additions. Alumni of recent years will note the improved conditions indicated by rules 1, 5, 7, and 8.

1. The Library shall be open each day from Monday to Friday, inclusive, between the hours of 8:30 a. m. and 12 m. and between 1:30 p. m. and 5:45 p. m., and on Saturday between the hours of 8:30 a. m. and 12 m.

2. No book, pamphlet, or paper may be taken from the Library until it has first been charged by the Librarian or one of his assistants.

3. Books, except as specified in Rules 4 and 5, may be kept out of the Library for fourteen days. At the discretion of the Librarian, they are subject to one renewal. The number of books is restricted to four.

4. Certain books, marked "Reserved," may be withdrawn for one library day only. From Saturday noon they may be retained until Monday morning at 8:30.

5. Certain books, including the current numbers of the magazines or periodicals, marked "Not to be taken from the Library," or such books or pamphlets as may be temporarily placed on the "Reserved" shelves, are to be consulted in the Reference Room of the Library only, and may not be taken from the building for any purpose whatsoever.

6. A fine of two cents for each Library Day shall be imposed for each book or periodical retained longer than fourteen days, except that the fine for any overdue "Reserved" book shall be ten cents for each Library Day.

7. Students shall not be allowed to study together in any part of the building.

8. No student shall be allowed in either the Faculty Room or the Librarian's Room, except such as may be employed by the Librarian.

9. Any student violating the above rules shall, at the discretion of the Library Committee, be denied the privileges of the Library.

David Ashley Hooker, of the senior class, has been appointed Library Assistant.

TO THE ALUMNI.

The record of this college was broken in September, 1904, when the largest entering class in its history was enrolled. But a still larger class entered last September, the current catalogue showing a Freshman class of sixty-five. This great increase in numbers is gratifying to every friend of the College, and especially to the alumni, the undergraduates, and the faculty. It is no shame to any college to desire greater numbers, and to work for greater numbers, provided no good thing in the way of scholarships or discipline is sacrificed thereby. The founders and benefactors of this College have established here an educational plant for a given object and surely it is only making good their beneficient purpose to utilize to the utmost the plant they have established. That would certainly be their wish, and in no better way can we honor their memory and show our appreciation and gratitude than by doing our best to make their bounty as effective as possible. This is true in the abstract. But there is a certain love and loyalty that every man feels for his own college which is not satisfied with this philosophic devotion. He delights to honor her and help her. He rejoices in her growth and prosperity because she is his own college, because fond memories cluster around her, because his heart is full of gratitude for what she has done for him, because she is indeed his alma mater. And this is why we have been having recently such large and increasing classes. The alumni have been doing a great deal of most effective work. Whether rich or poor, anyone could look up college preparatory students in his neighborhood or within the circle of his acquaintance and talk Middlebury to them, could send us their names, and in many ways contribute directly and most efficiently to the growth of the College. Some of our alumni have spent within the last year or two, not hours only, but days in this work. And it has told. Everybody knows that when a person is out of college and is absorbed and wearied in the compelling duties of life, there may not be much time or strength left for work of this sort. But after all there may be found a little time and a little strength and a lot of good will, and these in the aggregate, when turned to a common purpose, will make a great showing. As has before been said, if every graduate of Middlebury would once in five years send us a new student, the walls of the old College would not contain the numbers that would come. This appeal is made directly to the alumni. Put your shoulders to the wheel. Push! Help all you can in this particular way. We upon our part at the college end will pull all we can. The result will surprise and delight us all.

COLLEGE CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATIONS.

Y. W. C. A.

The most important matter before the young women this term is the Nashville Student Volunteer Convention. A special committee under the leadership of Miss Metcalf is raising a convention fund of $100 from the young women, alumnae, and friends. Miss Mary Pratt, '07, and Miss Alice Sears, '09, have been elected delegates.

The New England Convention at Lowell takes place February 16-18. Miss Mabel Stevenson, '07, will represent this Association.

The Bible Study Committee has divided its work into six neighborhood classes and a leaders' class. The Missionary Committee is conducting two classes in a course on the Philippines.

The glee club, which is being trained by Mrs. Howard, will work for the benefit of the Y. W. C. A. Miss Crane is business manager.

An Advisory Committee consisting of Mrs. Burt, Mrs. Bryant, and Mrs. Burrage was elected at the January business meeting.

Y. M. C. A.

W. E. Bristol, '07, and E. J. Berry, '08, were sent as delegates from this Association to the State Bible Study Conference at Ludlow, January 27. Reports from the various associations showed that Middlebury leads the state in enrollment for Bible study work. The members of the several Bible classes should aim to keep this record good.

W. H. Tinker, General Traveling Secretary of the Y. M. C. A., visited Middlebury on January 17-18. On Wednesday evening, he gave a fine address before the Y. M. C. A. and also spoke at the regular meeting of the Y. W. C. A.

Three Bible classes have been organized with an enrollment of twenty-eight men. The classes are led by W. S. Maggs, '07, C. L. Percy, '07, and J. M. D. Olmsted, '07. Two courses are given, one on the "Life of Christ," the other on the "Teachings of Christ and His Apostles." Both courses are outlined by E. I. Bosworth, Dean of Oberlin Theological School. A mission class on Japan is held each Sunday afternoon, under the leadership of Y. Suzuki, '07.

J. M. D. Olmsted, '07, and C. L. Percy, '07, have been elected regular delegates to the Nashville convention. Eugene Eddy, '08, is alternate.

WHY GO TO NASHVILLE?

This is the question that is upon the lips of hundreds of students in the college world. The query has come to us in our college life, and we echo the question: "Why go to Nashville?" Middlebury College should send delegates to Nashville for four reasons:

First, because of the contact the delegates will have with other college men. It is needless to say that the delegates to the International Convention will be, to a large extent, representative men—men whose social, ethical, and spiritual influence will be helpful. Our college is small and we need especially the larger contact. This is an opportune time for such contact. About five thousand delegates will probably be present and the convention promises to be the greatest student gathering in the world.

Second, because it will give the delegates a more eomprehensive view of a world-wide movement. We must all confess that we have but little conception of the "Student Volunteer Movement," in its relation to the great international problems which rest so heavily upon the Christian Church. The present movement was started in August, 1886, at Mount Hermon. Some two hundred men gathered from the colleges at the invitation of D. L. Moody. A previous movement of similar nature had been started at Williams, Princeton and Andover, but the present organization came into being under the vital influence of Mr. Moody. It was introduced in the various colleges by Messrs. Wilder and Furmon during the year 1886-87. The work in China, Africa, India, and the islands of the sea, is too vast to describe within the limits of this article.

Third, because of the personal uplift each delegate will receive. No student can mingle with men at that conference, listen to the noted speakers from every clime, and hear the cry of darkened minds and saddened hearts, without being moved to higher and holier ambitions. Ideals will be exalted, spirit quickened, and purposes formed which will end in rich fruition.

Fourth, because of what the delegates will bring back to us. That we need such an uplift as our delegates may bring, can best be answered by each individual. We are all aware that the warmth of our college Christian life has been chilled by icy contact with things material, and that all too much the indulgence of our selfish desires has prevailed.

Shall we not believe in great things from Nashville, for every student of our "Alma Mater"? W. S. M.

FRATERNITIES.

CHI PSI.

Alpha Mu of Chi Psi gave an informal dance in the Masonic Hall on Friday evening, Feb. 2. The rooms were very prettily decorated with banners and pictures. Miss Elizabeth Pinney furnished the music, and all reported a pleasant time. Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Cushman and Mrs. J. H. Stewart attended as chaperones.

DELTA KAPPA EPSILON.

The Chapter gave a dance at the Masonic Hall, Jan. 26. Besides the undergraduate members, Joseph A. Peck, '98, Alan Nelson, '01, and John A. Fletcher, '87, were present. The hall was tastefully decorated in the fraternity colors—red, blue, and gold. The patronesses were Mrs. Buttolph, wife of J. E. Buttolph, '82, and Mrs. J. A. Peck.

DELTA UPSILON.

The members of the fraternity are glad to have with them again Brothers Percy, '07, Eddy, '08, and Viele, '09.

The Chapter held its Semi-Annual Hop on the evening of Jan. 26. About fifteen couples attended.

The Sophomore delegation entertained a few friends in the fraternity rooms on Wednesday evening, January 31.

Sometime ago the Chapter received an autograph letter from Bro. William Travers Jerome of the Amherst Chapter acknowledging the congratulations of the Chapter on his re-election to the office of District Attorney for New York County.

Brother Holt, '05, was stroke oar on the winning crew of the Morrill Fours at Oxford, England, and now has the challenge cup in his possession. This cup has been competed for since 1871, but it is the first time for several years that it has been won by Exeter College of which Brother Holt is a member.

KAPPA DELTA RHO.

The Kappa Delta Rho fraternity entertained several of the upperclassmen with a dinner at the Addison House, Jan. 28. After dinner came a smoker and general good time at the fraternity room in Battell Block.

PI BETA PHI.

Vermont Alpha of Pi Beta Phi gave a card party at their chapter rooms on the evening of Nov. 25.

Several of the members of Vermont Alpha gave a candy-pull at the home of Miss Grace Hammond during the Thanksgiving vacation.

Mrs. George D. Ryder visited college friends at Thanksgiving.

Mrs. W. J. White gave an afternoon tea on Dec. 1, to the members of the Chapter in honor of her sister, Miss Daisy Russell, of Vermont Beta.

Miss Katharine Collins, '05, visited friends in college on Dec. 22.

The Chapter was recently presented with a punch bowl and standard by Mrs. George D. Ryder, formerly Edith Heaxt, ex-'08.

The Senior members of Pi Beta Phi entertained the other girls of the Senior class at a supper in the Chapter rooms on January 27.

Miss Ada Hurlburt, '01, recently visited the Chapter.

A daughter was born in November to Luella Whitney-Dunn, '99.

Mrs. J. E. Crane entertained the Chapter at her home on the evening of Jan. 19.

Miss Bertha Graves of Gloversville was the guest of her sister, Theresa Graves, '08, during the month of January.

ALPHA CHI.

During the Thanksgiving Recess the members of Alpha Zeta of Alpha Chi who remained in town entertained a number of the young men of the College at an informal party in their Chapter rooms.

Miss Fannie Milliken, '05, who is teaching in Swanton, Vt., spent the first Sunday of the term with friends in College.

On Thursday, Jan. 25, the Misses Pauline and Anne Smith entertained a few of their friends at the Alpha Chi Chapter rooms in honor of their cousin, Mr. Mark Eldridge, of the Worcester Polytechnic Institute, Worcester, Mass.

Miss Agnes Murdock, '07, spent Sunday, January 27, with Miss Minnie Burditt, ex'07, at Pittsford. Miss Burditt will go to New York to study music during the winter.

OBITUARY.

THE LAST OF HIS CLASS.

James Davie Butler, son of James Davie and Rachel (Harris) Butler, was born in Rutland, Vt., March 15, 1815. His father settled in Rutland in 1787. Doctor Butler prepared for college in Wesleyan Seminary, Wilbraham, Mass. He graduated from college in 1836, delivering at commencement the Latin Salutatory and also an oration on "Homer and the Poetical Merit of the Iliad." After spending a year in Yale Theological Seminary he returned to Middlebury where he served as tutor during five college terms. In 1840 he finished the course at Andover Theological Seminary. At his graduation from this institution he gave two addresses on Chrysostom, one before the literary societies on his life, the other on his preaching, at the anniversary exercises. He was immediately elected "Abbott Resident Fellow" (an endowed fellowship) at Andover, which position he held for four years.

Doctor Butler was an extensive traveler. He made six trips abroad, visiting a great part of Europe, Egypt, Greece, Palestine, Hawaii, Mexico, the West Indies, Japan, China, Ceylon, and India, as well as the southern and western parts of the United States and Canada. In his seventy-sixth year he made a trip around the world, traveling alone.

In the first half of 1845 he preached in the First Church of Burlington, Vt. As soon as he left the church he was made Professor of Languages and Literature and acting President at Norwich University, which position he held until 1847. Doctor Butler was ordained in 1847, and from that time until 1850 was pastor of the Congregational Church at Wells River, Vt. He was also pastor at South Danvers, Mass., 1851–1852, and Cincinnati, Ohio, 1852–1855. He was Professor of Ancient Languages at Wabash College, Ind., from 1855 to 1858, and at the University of Wisconsin from 1858 to 1867. After 1858 Doctor Butler's home was at Madison, Wis.

He was a voluminous writer of historical and literary articles. At various times he contributed to the Magazine of American History, Lippincott's, and Bibliotheca Sacra, and for twenty-six years to the New York Nation and other papers and periodicals. His addresses on "Deficiencies in Vermont History" and on "The Battle of Bennington," before the Vermont Historical Society, are among the most interesting and valuable papers contained in the printed proceedings of that society. He delivered the principal address at the Rutland Centennial Celebration, in October, 1870. Doctor Butler edited various documents relating to railway transportation which circulated by the millions in several different languages, and most of his papers on literary and historical subjects have been printed in both pamphlet and book form. He gave many lectures concerning his European trips and, during his absences abroad, acted as foreign correspondent for the New York Observer. The American Institute distributed 5,000 copies of his address delivered at Troy, N. Y., on the "Incentives to Mental Culture among Teachers." Doctor Butler was elected to the American Antiquarian Society in Worcester at so early a date that, at the time of his death, he was the oldest and longest enrolled member of that exclusive and distinguished body. His paper on "The Copper Age in Wisconsin" was received with much interest, and was much discussed at the Boston meeting of the society in 1877. His address on "Prehistoric Wisconsin" first brought out the pre-eminent riches of that state in implements of native copper. This address has circulated widely. Among other addresses he delivered "The Defence of Classical Studies" and "Commonplace Books," and among his printed sermons is his "Farewell Discourse" at Danvers. His pamphlets on the characteristics of Nebraska, first published in 1869, had a great influence in turning the stream of migration toward that state. His monograph on "Portraits of Columbus" was the first treatise on that subject in English. His paper on the "Hapax Legomena," or words used once for all in Shakespeare, has been everywhere recognized as a new departure in Shakespearean study.

Doctor Butler was an old fashioned classical scholar and possessed a mass of information in many widely separated fields. He was an excellent companion and was equally delightful as a correspondent. His range of human, scholarly interests seemed to have no limits. His cheer and optimism were reminders of the glorious fruitage of wise, well organized living. All who knew him were charmed by his uniform kindness of temper, his fair, frank estimate of men and things. In his later years he was a gentle, kindly, old man with a keen, eager face, meeting everyone with a happy greeting and some sage remark. He was open-hearted and responsive to the best impulses of his day.

From his alma mater Doctor Butler received the degrees of A. B., A. M., and, in 1862, LL. D.

On April 25, 1845, he married Anna, daughter of Rev. Joshua Bates who was President of Middlebury College from 1818 to 1840. She lived until 1892. They had four children, two sons and two daughters; James Davie; Henry Sigourney; Anna Bates; and Agnes Campbell.

Doctor Butler died at Madison, Wis., November 20, 1905.

G. T. H.

AN OLD SOLDIER.

John Calvin Orren Redington, son of John H. and Emily (Washburn) Redington, was born in Moscow, N. Y., August 8, 1837. He prepared for college in Colchester, Suffield, and Thompson, Conn. Colonel Redington graduated from Middlebury College in 1860. In 1861 he enlisted as a private at Ogdensburg in Company K, 18th Regiment, New York Volunteers. Later he was made captain of Company C, 60th Regiment. He was advanced to the rank of Lieutenant Colonel, and acted as Colonel at Chancellorsville. At Gettysburg, he was in command of the entire skirmish line of his division. In 1865, he was editor and publisher in Syracuse, N. Y. He was author of a Life of Admiral Dewey, and some other literary productions.

On August 4, 1868, Colonel Redington married Emma J. Swanger. They had four children: George Orren; Edward John; Arthur Calvin; and Bertram A.

Colonel Redington died on October 24, 1905, at his home in Syracuse, N. Y. G. T. H.

Judge Patrick H. Sanford, '46, died at his home in Knoxville, Ill., Oct. 27, 1905. Ex-Governor Stewart is now the only living member of the class of '46.

Rev. M. M. Martin, D. D., '61, died at his home in Orid, Mich., Sept. 25, 1902.

Charles H. Hubbard, ex-'99, brother to Frank Hubbard of Middlebury, was killed by a mine explosion at Uniontown, Pa., January 11, 1906. Mr. Hubbard was a civil engineer.

In place of the time-honored system of "rhetoricals," Mr. Rodeheaver is giving the three upper classes instruction in voice culture. The women's class meets after chapel on Saturday, and the men's class at four o'clock on Tuesday, of each week.

LOCAL NOTES.

The Glee Club has been reorganized, with Mr. Rodeheaver as leader, and C. A. Perkins, '07, as manager. It is now preparing for its annual series of concerts.

"The Rivals" will be presented by the Juniors at the end of the winter term. After the play will come the usual Junior Promenade.

The freshmen have organized a debating club which meets on Saturday evening of each week. At its last meeting the club voted to challenge the sophomores. It is to be hoped that this movement will lead to the reestablishment of debating as a prominent feature of Middlebury College life.

An account of the Senior Class election was omitted from the last number of THE CAMPUS. The officers chosen are as follows: President, J. M. Ricker; vice-president, Annie E. Metcalf; secretary, Anne F. Smith; treasurer, David A. Hooker. Class Day Officers — Orator, Harold R. Bird; ivy orator, George E. Kimball; will and presentation, Clifford D. Cushman; historian, May E. Peabody; prophet, Alice L. Duncan; poet, Florence E. Duncan. Senior Ball Committee—Charles B. Parker, George E. Kimball, Gordon D. MacQuivey.

The Base Ball Manager has so far secured ten games for the coming season. When the schedule is complete it will consist of about fifteen games. Trips will be made to northern New York, northern Vermont, and central New York. It has been very difficult, in some cases impossible, to make arrangements with teams whose games upon our schedule of last year were cancelled. In order to maintain a high reputation in college athletics, we must hereafter play every game upon the schedule.

The Freshman Banquet was held at the Bardwell House, Rutland, on the evening of December 7. Following the precedent set last year, the Freshmen took a special train while the Sophomores were in class. Several Sophomores and upper classmen went to Rutland on a later train, but no disturbance took place. The toast list was as follows:

TOASTMASTER, HENRY S. WHITE.

As this paper goes to press a post card from Professor Wright tells of his safe arrival in Italy. It is dated "Naples, Jan. 20," and says in part: "We came in yesterday morning after a very pleasant passage of twelve and one-half days. Everything seemed to conspire to make the trip enjoyable. We saw Gibraltar Tuesday morning under ideal conditions. A British man-of-war came into the harbor at Naples just ahead of us, and the guns of three or four battleships boomed our advent with salutes. Naples is a very interesting city. I rejoice to tell you that in the first day's round with cabmen, baggage-smashers, and so on, Mrs. Wright came out ahead. Vesuvius is in slight eruption; lava streams were running down the cone last night. This note is for all of you. As I write it is not yet five in the morning with you. May your dreams be sweet."

MARRIAGES.

Mortimer V. Drake, '03, of Ticonderoga, N. Y., and Miss Alice D. Cushman of Middlebury were united in marriage at the home of the bride, Wednesday evening, Dec. 27.

Alice D. Richmond, '05, of Northfield, Vt., was married to Dr. Bert Frank Allen of the same place, Wednesday, Dec. 20. Doctor Allen, who is a graduate of the Baltimore Dental College, has built up a fine practice, and is one of the rising professional men of Northfield.

Dr. Earl L. Cushman, '95, and Miss Louise Radford were married at Yonkers, N. Y., Saturday, Feb. 3. Doctor Cushman is now located in Brooklyn.

Charles W. Allen, '03, was married to Miss Minnie Holbrook at Bellingham, Wash., Dec. 31, 1905. Mr. and Mrs. Allen will make their home at Bellingham.

DISTINGUISHED GRANDSONS OF MIDDLEBURY.

The descendants of Vermonters are everywhere throughout the land; similarly, to a far greater degree than is generally known, men who have became famous in one and another field of activity, while not themselves, it may be, graduates of Middlebury, are sons of graduates. Eugene Field was the son of Roswell Martin Field, '32, who before settling in St. Louis in 1839, was a prominent lawyer of Windham County. Even less known in all probability is the fact that Edward Bellamy, of "Looking Backwards" fame, himself not a college graduate, was the son of Rufus King Bellamy, '35, from 1848 to 1882 pastor of the Baptist Church of Chicopee Falls, Mass., where in 1850 his distinguished son was born.

TO EACH READER OF THE CAMPUS.

With this number THE CAMPUS enters upon its second year of existence. The report of the Business Manager for last year showed these results:

Receipts, -	$307.15
Expenses, - -	263.93
Balance, - -	$43.22

This showing was certainly very creditable for a beginning, but THE CAMPUS should grow in size and usefulness as it becomes older. The present Business Manager has secured a large increase in amount of advertising matter, and if the subscription list can be built up in proportion, the paper will be placed in a still more prosperous condition. Such a condition would mean the addition of new features and a general increase in value. For example, we intend to furnish a full page picture of the late Prof. William Wells Eaton with the April number of THE CAMPUS. Do you want such features to continue? At present only one hundred of the undergraduates and about one-sixth of the living alumni are subscribers. Are you one of these subscribers, and is your subscription for this year paid? We think it may be taken for granted that every graduate and student of the college wants to support the college paper, whether he fully approves of its policy or not, the existence of such a paper is worth so much to the college that he should give it his aid.

The editors are always pleased to receive suggestions, and will always aim to satisfy the largest possible number of readers. We therefore ask you to send—with your dollar—your answers to the following questions:

1. What features of THE CAMPUS do you like?
2. What features of THE CAMPUS do you criticize?
3. What features would you add to the present paper?
4. What are your general suggestions regarding policy, etc?

We want this information. It will aid us in discovering ways to make THE CAMPUS more truly representative of all Middlebury College interests. Will you aid us?

THE EDITORS.

Places Ready for 1906 Graduates

We wish to announce that we have begun the work of selecting for the 15,000 employers whom we serve, the most capable men in the class of 1906. Last year we placed in high grade business and technical positions between 1500 and 1600 graduates; this year we expect to exceed that number. We now have ready for your consideration 1,231 opportunities. Write us today and we will tell you without charge what the chances are of securing the place you are best fitted to fill.

TELEPHONE.

Middlebury students should patronize, as far as possible, those who advertise in THE CAMPUS. The financial success of the publication is in a measure dependent on the income derived from advertisements, and such a return for favors shown will be most gratifying to the management.

The departments of Physics and Natural Sciences are well furnished with apparatus and laboratories, while the Cabinet and Museum furnish abundant specimens for illustration.

The principal expenses for the year, except for clothing and text books, amount to about $225.

The income of various scholarships, a part of them under the control of individual proprietors and a part furnished by the State, is available to students of good scholarship and correct deportment. The income is applied toward the payment of term bills, including tuition. The liberal aid thus furnished reduces the college bills so materially that no student of energy need be deterred by financial considerations from entering the College. Requests for scholarships may be addressed to the President.

The Faculty, under the direction of the Corporation, give to the first third of each class, on the basis of scholarship, honorary appointments for Commencement. Those receiving these appointments are eligible for election to the Phi Beta Kappa Society, provided that they have attained an average rank for the entire course of eighty-five per cent.

The Women's College is under the control of the Board of Trustees of Middlebury College; it is designed for the present that the young women shall be offered the same courses as the young men, be taught by the same instructors and enjoy the same privileges of the Library and the Laboratories, and be entitled to the same degrees.
